Dear FCC,I favor retention of the current five words per minute Morse code requirement, for amateur General and Extra class licenses. It does not impose some kind of onerous burden on the vast majority of candidates.
Reasonable accomodations are already in place for those with hearing impairment. I personally had a long and difficult time in learning the code. Back when it was 13 wpm, it was an unsurmountable obstacle for me. Now, with all of the teaching and learning aids available, I was able to attain the 5 wpm level, after only 7 months of daily effort. I know it is not easy. Nonetheless, I believe that the Morse requirement should be retained. To make all of our desires "instantly" available detracts greatly from any sense of achievement that might otherwise be obtained.
